Interviewer's Comments

Bea's people-oriented personality is reflected in her upbeat, approachable demeanour. Her past experience with children spans the ages of three- to twelve-year-olds, where she worked as an au pair and ballet assistant. Bea may not have as much formal experience as some of our other au pairs, but she makes up for that with her willingness to learn and grow her own skillset.

Bea does not shy away from difficult conversations and confrontation. Her ability to express herself in a respectful, yet assertive manner allows her to communicate with others in a productive manner. She possesses the unique ability to maintain organisation in her personal life, whilst remaining flexible in the face of emergencies and changes to her routine. It is Bea's light-hearted, yet focused attitude which allows her to manage stressful situations. She is diligent, and willing to exert time and energy to achieve her ambitions. It is here where Bea's open-mindedness serves her most, as she does not shy away from opportunities that don't align directly with her goals. Her ability to seek growth and learning in every aspect of life makes her skilled at engaging with children. This translates to a humility which lets her interact with children on their level, whilst cultivating a relationship founded on mutual respect and trust. Bea's empathetic nature allows her to respond to difficult behaviour in children with patience. Her past experience as an au pair involved working with a neurodiverse individual, serving as a testament to her supportive nature. Her love for working with people allows her to find joy in assisting children with navigating new challenges. Bea appreciates creativity and encourages out-of-the-box thinking in the children under her care. Her passion for physical activities would no doubt be energising to any child and inspire a willingness to learn through a variety of mediums. Overall, Bea's capacity for hard-work and responsibility would make her an asset to any family.
